SONG OF THE SEA-GULLS.

BY ELIZA COOK.

Birds of the land, ye may carol and fly
O'er the golden corn, 'neath a harvest sky ;
Your portion is fair, 'mid fields and flowers,
But it is not so broad or so free as ours !
Ye are content with the groves and the hills,
Ye feed in the valleys and drink at the rills ;
But what are the joys of the forest and plain
To those that we find on the fresh wide main !

Birds of the land, ye rear your broods
In the lofty trees or the tangled woods,
Where the branch may be reft by the howling wind
Or the prowling schoolboy seek and find !
But we roost high on the beetling rock,
That firmly stands the hurricane's shock ;
Our callow young may rest in a home
Where no shot can reach, and no footstep come.

Birds of the land, ye shrink and hide
As the tempest cloud spreads black and wide ;
Your songs are hushed in cowering fear
As the startling thunder-clap breaks near !
But the brave gull soars while the deluge pours,
While the stout ship groans and the keen blast roars ;
O ! the sea-gull leads the gayest life
While the storm-fiends wage their fiercest strife.

We lightly skim o'er the breaker's dash
Where timbers strike with parting crash ;
We play round the dark hull sinking fast,
And find a perch on the tottering mast ;
More loud and glad is our shrieking note,
As the planks and spars of the wrecked bark float ;
There live we in reveling glee,
'Mid the whistling gale and raging sea.

We are not caught and caged to please
The fondled heirs of wealth and ease ;
The hands of beauty never come
With soft caress or dainty crumb ;
We are not the creatures of petted love,
We have not the fame of the lark or dove ;
But our screaming tone rings harsh and wild,
To the glad ear of the fisher's child.

He hears our pinions flapping by,
And follows our track with wistful eye,
As we leave the clouds with rapid whirl
To dive 'neath the water's sweeping curl ;
He laughs to see us plunge and lave
While the northern gale is waking the wave ;
And dances about 'mid sand and spray,
To mimic the sea-gull's merry play.

We hold our course o'er the deep or the land,
O'er the swelling tide or weed grown strand ;
We are safe and joyous when mad waves roll,
We sport o'er the whirlpool, the rock, and the shoal—
Away on the winds we plunge our wings,
And soar the freest of all free things :
O ! the sea-gull leads a merry life
In the glassy calm or tempest strife.

AGRICULTURE.

Preserving Cabbages.—The editor of the Maine Farmer gives the following as his mode of preserving cabbages in winter, which we have no doubt is a good one.

We have several times succeeded in preserving cabbages well through the winter, in the following manner. Our object in pursuing the course we are about to give, was to procure heads from those that had not headed solidly at the time they were gathered. Dig a trench in the side of a hill, where the water will run off freely. Let the trench be wide enough to admit the cabbage heads, and as deep as the cabbages are long. We then pulled the cabbages up. We place a board or a layer of straw in the bottom of the trench ; then, closing the leaves together placed the cabbages,head downward and root upward, in the trench, close to each other, and pressed straw about the sides, so as to keep the leaves closed. We then placed a couple of boards over the trench, in the form of a roof, and threw earth upon them, thereby burying them up. In the spring they were taken out in good condition, and the heads were closed quite solid. Care should be taken to keep the water out. A dry and moderately cool situation preserves cabbages best in winter. A cave or rude cellar hole in the side of a bank or hill with loosely constructed door,makes a very good store room for cabbages.

Potato Rot.—A writer in the Lowell Journal, recommends fall planting, as a remedy for the potato rot. He says :

"It has been universally acknowledged that very early potatoes come to maturity and get out of the way before the disease begins. Therefore the plan I propose, is to plow the ground we intend for a potato crop for the next year in September or October ; and about the middle of November, or as soon as it becomes so cool that the seeds will not sprout in the ground, to hole out the ground for the potato hills to a good depth, somewhat deeper than would be necessary in the spring, drop in the potato, whole, not in cuttings, and to put on the top of the potato a good shovel-full of dry fine cut straw, and to cover the whole with an ordinary covering of earth.

It is no injury to the potato if it freezes, for if the frost comes out before it is removed from the earth, the potato will vegetate as well and is just as good for eating, as if it had not been frozen.

I have plowed up potatoes in the spring that were buried over winter, not more than two inches deep, that were just as fresh and as sound as newly dug ones in the fall. Farmers are requested to try the experiment."

SELECTED TALE.

THE CANDY GIRL,

OR, THE MISER OUTWITTED.

BY J. N. TUCKER.

CHAPTER I.

"Run to the Post Office, Fidelia,' said James Quimby, (who had lost his wife, and came near losing his own life, by a fire,) 'and see if there is a letter for me.—I perceive by the paper, that the Great Western has arrived, and it is possible we may have a letter from our poor boy. O that he was here to comfort me in my afflictions."

The faithful girl quickly removed the boiling kettle from the coals, and left her daily task of Candy-making, to obey her suffering father's request ; and in a short time returned without a letter.

At this announcement the afflicted man turned his face from the girl, that she might not witness his grief, and wept ; while she in silence resumed her task.—Having finished it she went to her father, and finding that he slept, took her candy and went out, as she had been accustomed to do, to obtain by the sale of it, the means of their scanty subsistence. Fidelia, was, at this time, some fifteen years of age.—She had a brother, George, about five years younger than herself, who assisted in disposing of her candy. The neat and tidy appearance of Fidelia and George were always a good recommendation to their business, and they readily found sale for what they made.

And not a few purchased from Fidelia, more in sympathy and kindness, than from a desire to eat her candy. One place was there especially, at which she always found a smiling purchaser. This was at the village academy. Robert Videtto, was there ; the only son of a rich miser, who had by his success in business, with aid of a large patrimony, amassed a princely fortune. But aside from what he bestowed for the education of his son, few were the dollars that escaped his firm grasp. And his greatest anxiety appeared to be, that his son might with a good education, inherit, not only his fortune, but his parsimony and aristocratic pride. But it was impossible. Robert was the most perfect opposite of his father—free and generous. He had learned from his good preceptor, that human worth did not consist in the gaudy trappings of wealth, nor in lineage. And notwithstanding the humble circumstances of Fidelia, he had formed for her a warm attachment, and had resolved at some day, to offer her his hand. The frequent expressions of admiration of the "Candy Girl,' which the old man had heard, were not lost upon him. He had noticed her uncommon beauty and modesty, and knowing the disposition of his son, felt not a little alarmed, lest there should be difficulty in the way of his plans of securing for him a rich marriage.

CHAPTER II.

About two years had passed away ; during which time no news had been received of the fate of Charles Quimby, who was in England. He had written, but his letters never reached the anxious father.—One evening, however, about this time, on going to the Post Office, Fidelia saw on the list a letter from London, directed to 'James Quimby, or his daughter Fidelia.' On breaking the seal, she learned with great delight it was from her brother, and contained a fifty pound note, assuring them he was in good business, and intended, during the year to visit America.

A new era seemed to be created at once in the history of the poor family. It was immediately resolved, that with a portion of the funds thus timely obtained, as requested by Charles, Fidelia should enjoy the long coveted privilege of attending a seminary. George was already at a trade, where, by his industrious habits, he was enabled not only to clothe himself, but to contribute in a small degree to the support of his helpless father.

There being a seminary of high character in the vicinity, arrangements were soon made by which Fidelia could spend her time in studies, without being absent a long time from her father—and at evening both George and herself were at home.

With the assurance enjoyed in her studies from the frequent visits from Robert Vinetto, (who, notwithstanding the prohibitions of his father, found frequent opportunities for calling at the humble, yet always neat and well arranged cottage,) who was an excellent scholar, Fidelia soon became proficient in most languages, and evinced a power of intellect combined with mind and heart well disciplined that produced a great influence upon the mind of Robert, and entirely won his heart. And when he had reached his twenty-second year, and Fidelia had quitted her school, being in her nineteenth year, he resolved to consumate his long established purpose of marrying the "Candy Girl." This determination was announced to his father with due formality upon the anniversary of his birth-day. And although the proud father feared as much, yet when the young man calmly avowed his intentions, it was shocking to his opinions of propriety. For a moment he sat in perfect silence, with his son, a fire evidently struggling to break forth in one of those exhibitions of passionate fury to which he was subject.

"Marry that pauper, my son, if you will but remember in that hour which you are her husband, you shall be made penniless. I will disinherit you, and my fortune shall be given to one who can appreciate the distinctions between wealth and poverty."

"Be not rash, my father," said Robert, "Fidelia it is true, is poor—but she is a woman of rare qualifications, and will bring happiness into your family. The attachment which exists between us is mutual. It has grown up with our youth and promise to render our life eminently happy. I should regret to injure the feelings of a parent, so kind and so dearly loved, but I cannot think it the duty of a man to be governed in the choice of a companion for life, by the feelings of even a father."

CHAPTER. III.

Soon after the interview, Fidelia received another letter from her brother, apologizing for his long delay in visiting them, again enclosing fifty pounds, and informing her that he should now defer his visit until he could arrange his affairs for a permanent location in this country. He had married a lady of considerable wealth and distinction, the daughter of his former employer, with whom he was now in business. The firm intended to open a house in New York, and he was to superintend it. With the assistance thus rendered, the family of Mr. Quimby were amply able to appear in respectable style, and the tender anxieties of Fidelia and her brother, in regard to their believed parent greatly relieved. Suitable help was obtained, and Fidelia managed her affairs to spend the summer at Saratoga. This arrangement, however, was only known to herself and Robert.

And when she left her father with assurance that his comfort would be regarded by one she left behind, it was believed by friends that she had gone to visit a poor relation in the far west.

The announcement of her departure, was received with great pleasure by Robert's father, who soon regained his accustomed sociability towards his son, as he saw him apparently resigned to his will, and devoting his attention to the numerous admirers (of his wealth) whom Mr. Videtto contrived to introduce to him.

• • * • •

One afternoon in July, (as Robert and his father were enjoying a short ride among the green hills of their vicinity) the old gentleman ventured to question him on the subject which had given him so much uneasiness.

"I have about concluded," said Robert, to seek a wife in accordance with your own views of propriety. It would be a grief to me to mar the happiness of my father, although I think you were greatly mistaken in regard to the worth of Miss Quimby.'

"No doubt she was amiable, and would have made you a good wife,' said Mr. V., 'but I could not have been reconciled to so unnatural an alliance. And beside, my son, I doubt whether your own experience will not yet satisfy you of the propriety of what may have appeared to you a measure of severity on my part.'

"I hope so indeed,' said Robert.

"I have been thinking for a few days past, said Mr. Videtto, 'of proposing to you a short visit to the Springs. My own health is not very good, and I doubt not it would improve your own spirits.'

"With great pleasure, my dear sir, should I spend a few weeks at the Springs. I am told the company there this season is of the highest order.'

"It is really so. I have just received a letter from an old friend of mine, who informs me he has a lady among fashionable guests, whose brother is a wealthy merchant in London. And she is now waiting a visit from him, intending when he returns to accompany him. She is represented as a great beauty—possessing great amiableness, and well qualified for the station to which your hand would elevate her.'

"I hope my father will dismiss his hopes in regard to this matter,' said the blushing son 'and let us appear as visitors and not as suitors, for I may not be pleased with the fair Donna, and were it to be otherwise it is more than probably she is already 'engaged.'' This pleasant retort caused the old man to smile, as they drove into the beautifully ornamented park and alighted.

"Do as you think proper my son—but my purpose is fixed. I can never consent to own myself the father of a pauper, whose only qualifications are a pretty face and a limited education.' So saying he left the room trembling with mortification and displeasure.

Upon being left alone, Robert calmly gave himself up to a careful contemplation of the consequences of his purpose. He did not wish to incur his father's displeasure—nor did he feel willing to resign the object of his early and only love to so unworthy a caprice. And he resolved to marry her and meet the consequences.—With the education he had acquired, and with habits of industry already formed, he feared not to encounter the responsibilities of life, in poverty. Thus reflecting he sought Fidelia, to whom he frankly disclosed his situation. Instead of producing displeasure, the announcement of the prospective poverty of Robert, was received with delight by the high-minded girl.

"Now,' said she, 'an obstacle in the way of our union, which has caused me much trouble is removed. I had more fear from your wealth than I fear from poverty. Our circumstances, so unequal before, have often appeared to demand of me a refusal of your offer. Accustomed to labor, and not unused to the severities of life, I can smile upon adversities so long as I enjoy health and the smiles of Providence.'

"Noble girl,' said Robert. 'I feel this moment, happier, richer, than were I the possessor of thrice my father's wealth.'

On returning home that evening, a plan was suggested by the ever active mind of Robert, which he believed he might innocently adopt, and which he had no doubt would succeed. At least he resolved to try it.

CHAPTER IV.

A few days only had passed, and the carriage of Mr. Videtto and his son drove dashingly up to the hotel of Mr. ——, of Saratoga, where they were warmly greeted by their old friend, and every arrangement made for their comfort within the power of 'mine host.' A splendid room was furnished, and in a short time many visitors introduced. Among the rest the bell of the season, Miss Cornell from London, the 'beautiful rich lady' so much admired, and so highly recommended by the friend of old Mr. Videtto.

"She is a charming lady, upon my word," said the old gentleman to his son as they were left alone.

"Yes, I should think so, surely, from the short acquaintance we have enjoyed," replied the apparently unconscious Robert.

"And would adorn the palace of a king, said the old man. "Did you mark the splendid jewels upon her delicate fingers—her ease and graceful bearing ?—You may rely upon it Robert, she is of no humble origin. A lady of high rank,seeking a congenial spirit, among the republicans of her sister nation."

"Or she may be a poor girl whose ambition is above her birth," said Robert, casting a scrutinizing glance upon his father.

"No, no," replied he, "I have seen enough in the world to detect that if such were the fact. Your young hearts may be deceived, but not old and experienced."

The old miser returned to his room that night with a degree of pleasure rarely experienced. He had long sighed to see his son united with one who should add to his wealth and dignity. And now that they, as he imagined, had accidentally fallen into the company of one every way worthy of his son, and with whom there was a fair prospect of union, he was delighted. And he resolved to encourage as far as might be proper, the apparent admiration of his son for the fair Miss Cornell. Nor was he unsuccessful. And he had the unbounded gratification in a short time, of seeing Robert paying the most marked attentions to the lady. Nor was he in any haste to cut short their visit although it had already exceeded the time fixed upon for their return.

A letter had been received from her brother by Fidelia, remitting a few pounds and informing her that by the middle of August he should meet her at the Springs, accompanied by his wife.

CHAPTER V.

"Well, sir," said Robert one day as they were indulging in a morning ride, "I have concluded to marry Miss Cornell,with your consent, and if granted, shall be happy to celebrate the nuptial ceremony at this place immediately on the arrival of her brother."

"You have my most cheerful consent my son," said Mr. Videtto, the tears of joy trickling down his furrowed cheeks.—"And presenting a deed of three hundred acres of the best land in ——— and a check for twenty thousand dollars on the ——— bank of New York, "here is a trifle for your expenses on the occasion." With expressions of gratitude, the deed and check were received, and in a few days the money was safely deposited in his pocket.

The happy Robert and the fair Miss C. were greeted with many expressions of joy by their numerous friends and admirers which each had won by their uniformly kind and agreeable manner, and high anticipations were entertained of an agreeable and splendid party on the appointed festal day. Cards of invitation were freely circulated, and each esteemed himself honored by being so fortunate as to receive one. And when at length the day arrived on which the London merchant appeared in the beauty and elegance of form—of which many less favored by nature were envious, and was formally introduced to the elated father, and many friends, the joy of all seemed to be complete.

The next day after his arrival was the eventful time of the wedding. And a large, and fashionable party assembled at an early hour, and exchanged the congratulations of the occasion. Among which none appeared more happy than the delighted father of the successful bridegroom.

The ceremony was duly pronounced by a worthy curate, who was officiating in the village, and the party afterwards repaired to the saloon of the hotel to spend the evening at a splendid soiree, given in honor of the occasion by Mr. Videtto and his son.

The next day Mr. Videtto with his son and the beautiful young wife, her brother, and a few friends, returned to their residence, where preparations had been made for a select party, and the happy company spent another evening in a delightful manner. None seemed more to enjoy it than the old gentleman.

CHAPTER VI.

A few days after the wedding had taken place, as the family were indulging in a social chat in the library of Videtto place, while the admiration of the old gentleman was unbounded, as the eye of Robert might be seen to glance archly toward the blushing wife, and then steadily for a moment upon his father when he said," Does my kind father admire my Fidelia,although for herself? and would he still cherish the fond attachment he feels, were he to be informed that instead of being a wealthy heiress, she is indeed a poor orphan ?

Not at all dreaming of the object of this inquiry, the old gentleman replied with warmth, "indeed Robert, I could do no less. I trust my estimate of the worth of my sweet daughter is not based on any qualifications her wealth or parentage may give her, but from the evidence already given aside from that, that she is worthy of my son."

At that moment the door opened, and the servant led into the library a feeble man accompanied by a noble looking and intelligent youth, upon whose arm he leaned as he slowly approached the centre of the room.

Robert arose immediately, and extending his hand warmly embraced the stranger and introduced to the old gentleman, "Mr. Quimby, the worthy father of my wife, Fidelia, the 'Candy Girl."

"How ? what ? your wife's father, Mr. Quimby ? Impossible !"

"It is truly so, my dear sir, and I trust you will find him no less worthy of your esteem, than you acknowledge yourself to have found his charming daughter, my wife.

"But how is this ?" said Mr. Videtto, in surprise. "Please explain the matter."

"Be seated sir, and I will do so," said Robert, "I was satisfied that the objections to my union with Fidelia were founded upon false education, and a false estimate of human worth. And when I learned your views, I was resolved upon a plan which should not only convince you of your mistake, but secure to me the object of my choice, with your consent. My plan was deliberate, well laid, and as you see, successful. The name of Miss Cornell was assumed upon her going to the springs, and her brother who was in her secret has addressed her accordingly. I knew your heart, and felt sure that its generosity was equal to the event."

"And you shall not be disappointed,my worthy son. For although I had formed a resolution, never to acknowledge as my daughter one who was not your equal in wealth and parentage, yet I freely forgive you the drama, in which you have been so successful, even though it be at my expense —and the more especially, since it has been so well enacted."

Nor did he ever to the day of his death, regret the event which had consummated the happiness of his son. Fidelia was the pride and joy of his heart, and enjoyed the admiration and love of all who knew her. And no one seemed better to enjoy the interesting history of the innocent fraud,in his declining days, than the father-in-law of the "Candy Girl."

Men shall have the pre-eminence above women, because of those advantages wherein God hath caused the one of them to excel the other, and for that which they expend of their substance in maintaining their wives.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Unpublished Letters of Mr. Webster.

"Washington, March 13, 1852.

"John Taylor : I am glad to hear from you again, and to learn that you are well, and that your teams and tools are ready for spring's work, whenever the weather will allow you to begin. I sometimes read books on farming ; and I remember that a very sensible old author advises farmers 'to plow naked and sow naked.' By this he means that there is no use in beginning spring's work till the weather is warm, that a farmer may throw aside his winter clothes and roll up his sleeves. Yet he says we ought to begin as early in the year as possible. He wrote some very pretty verses on this subject, which, as far as I remember, run thus :—

"'While yet the spring is young, while earth unbinds
The frozen bosom to the western winds ;
While mountain snows dissolve against the sun,
And streams, yet new, from precipices run,
E'en in this early dawning of the year,
Produce the plow, and yoke the sturdy steer ;
And goad him till he smoke beneath his toil,
And the bright share is buried in the soil.'

"John Taylor, when you read these lines, do you not see the snow melting,and the little streams beginning to run down the slopes of your Punch-brook pasture, and the new grass starting and growing in the trickling water, all green, bright and beautiful ? And do you not see your Durham oxen smoking from heat and perspiration as they draw along your great breaking-up plough, cutting and turning over the tough sward in your meadow in the great field ? The name of this sensible author is Virgil ; and he gives farmers much other advice, some of which you have been following all the winter without even knowing that he had given it.

"'But when cold weather, heavy snow and rain,
The laboring farmer in his house restrain,
Let him forecast his work, with timely care,
Which else is huddled when the skies are fair ;
Then let him mark the sheep, and wet the shining share,
Or hollow trees for boots ; or number o'er
His sacks ; or measure his increasing store ;
Or sharpen stakes, and mend each rake and fork.
So to be ready, in good time to work—
Visit his crowded barns at early morn,
Look to his granary, and shell his corn ;
Give a good breakfast to his numerous kine,
His shivering poultry and his fattening swine.'"

And Mr. Virgil says some other things, which you understand up at Franklin as well as ever he did :—

"'In chilling winter swains enjoy their store,
Forget their hardships, and recruit for more ;
The farmer to full feasts invites his friends,
And what he got with pains, with pleasure spends ;
Draws chairs around the fire, and tells once more
Stories which often have been told before ;
Spreads a clean table with things good to eat,
And adds some moistening to his fruit and meat ;
They praise his hospitality, and feel
They shall sleep better after such a meal !'

"John Taylor, by the time you have got through this you have read enough. The sum of all is, be ready for your spring's work as soon as the weather becomes warm enough, and then put your hand to the plow and look not back.

Daniel Webster.

Washington Wednesday, March 17, 1852.

"John Taylor : Go ahead. The heart of the winter is broken, and before the 1st day of April all your land may be plowed. Buy the oxen of Captain Marston, if you think the price fair. Pay for the hay. I send you a check for $160, for these two objects. Put the great oxen in a condition to be turned out and fattened. You have a good horse-team, and I think in addition to this, four oxen and a pair of four-year-old steers will do your work. If you think so, then dispose of the Stevens oxen, or unyoke them, and send them to the pasture for beef. I know not when I shall see you, but I hope before planting. If you need anything, such as guano, for instance, write to Joseph Buck, Esq., Boston, and he will send it to you.

"Whatever ground you sow or plant, see that it is in good condition. We want no pennyroyal crops. "A little farm well tilled,' is to a farmer the next best thing to a little wife well willed.' Cultivate your garden. Besure to produce sufficient quantities of useful vegetables. A man may half support his family from a good garden. Take care to keep my mother's garden in good order, even if it cost you the wages of a man to take care of it. I have sent you many garden seeds. Distribute them among your neighbors. Send them to the stores in the village, that everybody may have a part of them without cost. I am glad that you have chosen Mr. Pike Representative. He is a true man ; but there are in New-Hampshire many persons who call themselves Whigs, who are no Whigs at all, and no better than Disunionists. Any man who hesitates in granting and securing to every part of the country its just and its Constitutional rights, is an enemy to the whole country.

"John Taylor : If one of your boys should say that he honors his father and mother, and loves his brothers and sisters, but still insists that one of them shall be driven out of the family, what can you say of him but this, that there is no real family love in him ? You and I are farmers ; we never talk politics ; our talk is of oxen ; but remember this—that any man who attempts to excite one part of the country against another, is just as wicked as he would be who should attempt to get up a quarrel between John Taylor and his neighbor, old Mr. John Sanborn, or his other neighbor, Captain Burleigh. There are some animals that live best in the fire, and there are some men who delight in heat, smoke, combustion and even general conflagration. They do not follow the things which make for peace. They enjoy only controversy, contention and strife. Have no communion with such persons, either as neighbors or politicians. You have no more right to say that Slavery ought not to exist in Virginia, than a Virginian has to say that Slavery ought to exist in New-Hampshire. This is a question left to every State to decide for itself ; and if we mean to keep the States together, we must leave to every State this power of deciding for itself.

"I think I never wrote you a word before upon politics. I shall not do it again. I only say love your country, and your whole country ; and when men attempt to persuade you to get into a quarrel with the laws of other States, tell them "that you mean to mind your own business," and advise them to mind theirs. John Taylor, you are a free man ; you possess good principles ; you have a large family to rear and to provide for by your labor. Be thankful to the Government which does not oppress you, which does not bear you down by excessive taxation, but which holds out to you and to yours the hope of all the blessings which liberty, industry and security may give. John Taylor, thank God, morning and evening, that you were born in such a country. John Taylor, never write me another word upon politics. Give my kindest remembrance to your wife and children ; and when you look from your eastern windows upon the graves of my family, remember that he who is the author of this letter must soon follow them to another world.

Daniel Webster."

Anecdote of Judge Story.

The Portsmouth Journal gives an anecdote of the late Judge Story, which it says has never been in print. A few years ago, at a Court in New Hampshire where Judge Story presided, a case came on in which the recollection of an old lady was taken to ascertain at what time a particular event of long standing occurred. She stated with confidence that it took place in a certain year. This led to a very particular cross examination, by a young lawyer, who was wedded to nothing but the law. "How do you know marm, that the occurrence took place in that year ?" "Oh, I am certain it did." "But, marm, how are you certain of it ? We must know what makes you certain of it ?" "Well, if you must know it was the same year my second son was born." "Well, old lady, can you not be mistaken as to the time of that event—can you—" Here Judge Story protested against further examination, and said to the Attorney, "There is no doubt, sir, on this point. The mother cannot be mistaken in the age of her children—if you cannot tell the age of your own, go home and ask your wife, and she will tell you." The blushing attorney bowed amid the smiles of the bar. He has since taken a wife.

A period comes in the life of every man of a generous nature, when the home of his father loses its brightness and the heart begins to treasure up its hopes in the ideal world, which is illustrated by the fancy and peopled by the beings of love. This is for the most part the crisis of life, and disappointment either makes or mars the future. A vigorous and lofty mind resists the shock, that withers up the heart of fallen man.

BY THE MAILS.

Swimming Clubs are quite common in Scotland, in England, and in most other European countries,—but we have yet to learn that we have any in the United States. A late Edinburgh paper gives the following account of a trial of skill in the waters of the Forth, for which prizes were awarded.

The silver medal for fast swimming, given by the club was competed for at the Chain Pier, distance 200 yards, and was cleverly won by Mr. B. Baker, of Edinburgh, by about ten yards. On the 19th, the competition for the silver medal in scientific swimming took place. The swimming included a number of different feats, such as the easiest and neatest at the straight stroke and the side stroke swimming like a quadruped with the hands on the back, floating, turning somersaults backwards and forwards, as also various ways of turning in the water, rolling as if down a stream, etc. The medal was awarded to Mr. Alexander, who did the whole with an ease an elegance as if quite at home in the water. On the 20th, the silver medal for going fartherest, and remaining longest under water, was won by Mr. C. Anderson, Edinburgh, who went about 56 yards, and was about 55 seconds under water. On the 28th, the silver medal presented by Mr. A. Greig, to the frequenter of the Chain Pier, for competition in fast swimming, (distance 150 yards east of the pier and back, or 300 yards,) was won by Mr. A. W. B. Conally. Twenty-eight competitors. The contest was very exciting, two coming in together, and was only gained by about an arm's length in six and a half minutes. On the 29th, the competition for the silver medal for deep diving took place. White substances thrown into the water, about 20 feet deep, were dived for and recovered. Two of the competitors being equal, the decision was deferred.

A Young Emigrant.—Not long since we witnessed at the steamboat dock in this city, a little incident worthy of passing notice, and illustrating the familiar adage that "truth is often stranger than fiction." An anxious mother had for several days been eagerly awaiting the arrival of a little daughter about five years of age, from the "Emerald Isle," where, for some reason this her youngest child had been left when an infant. The little girl had been put on board a ship at Liverpool, in charge of the Captain, who on his arrival at Quebec, procured her passage on a St. Lawrence steamer to Montreal. A kind hearted gentleman of this city, knowing the circumstances, made arrangements with an obliging officer on one of the Lake Ontario steamers, to see the little lone emigrant safely to Oswego. After being disappointed several times, the fond mother was again at the boat, and the moment the plank was thrown out, she rushed on board and soon had her darling child in her arms.—She was a tidy, smart, red cheeked girl, and seemed to have enjoyed her long voyage remarkably well. At first, she looked wildly at her mother, but a few endearing words and fond kisses made the little pilgrim recognize her best and truest earthly friend. But strange to tell, her little brother, who wept for joy as he embraced his long lost sister, she did not know! What is more beautiful, potent and holy than a Mother's love?

A Ship and Crew Destroyed by Lightning.—On Saturday, intelligence was received at Lloyd's of the total destruction of the ship Maise, of Queenstown, Pearson master, by lightning, on the 3d of August last, when off the Island of Malta. The ship, being on her passage from Ibrail to Queenstown, was overtaken by a violent thunderstorm. At half-past 10 P. M., the vessel was struck by lightning, which passed down her mainmast and, striking the hull separated it in two pieces, fore and aft. The ship instantly went down with the crew fourteen in number, and two passengers. Capt. Pearson, on rising, caught a floating spar from the wreck, on which he continued to buoy himself up, and for seventeen hours afterward he kept himself above water, when he was happily descried by a Maltese coasting vessel, and landed at Queenstown, Ireland, the whole of the crew and passengers having perished.

Pure Air in Schools.—At a late Educational Convention at Newark, Dr. Griscom, of New York, urged upon school Committee-men and teachers the importance of pure air for scholars. He said that it would astonish some, when he said that respiration was the last act of digestion. This act oxydizes and de-carbonizes the blood. The want of fresh and pure air is among the prominent cases of mortality. It is a fact, that half of the race die before the age of twenty-one. The school room and dormitory are changed into the abodes of death. Fresh air is shut out, and foul air, the fell minister of death, kept in. When will due attention be paid to the subject of thorough ventilation in constructing buildings?

A New England Custom.—According to universal custom, in the town of Marshfield, on the sabbath of Mr. Webster's death between the hours of seven and eight in the morning, the bell of the parish church was rung violently, to announce to the startled inhabitants within hearing, that a death had occurred among them.—Then it was struck three times three as a signal, that a male person had died. Next, the bell was strck slowly and deliberately seventy strokes, to denote the age of the dead; and then there went up a mournful voice from every house, "it must be that Daniel Webster is dead."

Valuable Recipe.—In compactly built cities, especially, more or less annoyance is experienced from the proximity of cess-pools, sinks, &c., and in warm weather health often suffers. We have reason to know that a pound of copperas, (six cents worth,) dissolved in a bucket of water and thrown where the effluvia proceeds from, affords an effectual remedy, by changing the gas into an unvolatile concretion.

One Scotchman complained that he had got a ring in his head. "Do ye ken the reason o' that?" asked his worthy crony. "No." "I'll tell you—it's because its empty." "And have ye never a ringing in your head?" quoth the other.—"No, never." "And you ken the reason? It's because it's cracked."

Miss Shannon, while in the act of closing the window shutters in the fourth story of her residence in Philadelphia, fell to the pavement, dashing her brains out, and causing almost instant death.

Naval.—At the present time business in the Navy Yard, at Charlestown is very brisk, and will doubtless so continue until spring. The steamer Hancock has been cut in two, and will receive an addition of about twenty-five feet. She will be in the water on the first of December, and will be ready for sea in twenty days after. The Vermont is in the dock, undergoing extensive repairs, which will not be completed until spring. The sloop-of-war Albany is fitting out, and awaits orders from the Department. The Decatur can be got ready for sea at twenty-four hours notice, but no officers have yet been ordered for her.—There are seamen enough, however, on board the Ohio—receiving ship—for both vessels. The Decatur is intended for the Home Station, as is also the Albany. The Vermont will join Commodore Perry's squadron for the East Indies. The Hancock will doubtless be despatched on a surveying cruise to Bhering's Straits and elsewhere.

There are now 80 workmen in the various departments of business, employed in the Yard. The boss mechanics receive $3 per day, carpenters from $2,25c to $2,50c, and other laborers, on the average, $1,75c, which, at the present time, is regarded fair compensation. To those who have never seen the tanks which are used on board U. S. ships, they may appear as a curiosity. They are of iron, and of all shapes square, hexagonal, cylindrical, and in fine, made to fit the vessel, so that no space devoted to them may be left unoccupied. The Vermont will carry forty of these tanks, or about 100,000 gallons, which will not be regarded as a large quantity, when we consider that she carries 1000 souls, and each person is allowed one gallon of water per day.

A Patriot's Prayer. — Many years ago, on a well remembered occasion, when the Union was just undergoing one of those tests which threatened to rend it in twain, Daniel Webster closed one of the most soul-stirring speeches he ever delivered with the following glorious sentiments:

"When my eyes for the last time shall be raised to behold the sun in heaven, may they not gaze upon the broken fragments of a dishonored but once glorious Union; upon States dissevered, discordant, belligerent; upon a land rent with civil feuds, and drenched, it may be, in paternal blood. Let their last feeble and lingering gaze rather behold the glorious ensign of the Republic now known and honored throughout the earth still full high advanced—not one stripe erased or polluted, not one star obscured, but streaming in all their original lustre, and bearing for its motto no such miserable interrogatory as 'What is all this worth?' nor those of the words of delusion and folly, "Liberty first and Union afterwards;' but everywhere, spread all over in characters of living light, blazing on all its ample folds, as they float over the sea and over the land, and in every wind under the whole heavens that other sentiment, dear to every true American heart, "Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.'"

Yankee Enterprise in South America.—By the schooner Lamartine, which cleared at this port on Thursday for Cumana Venezuela, a party of adventurers go out, furnished with a complement of machinery, for the purpose of raising treasure from the wreck of the Spanish vessel "San Pedro," which was lost off Venezuela, more than a century ago. It is supposed that the vessel had about $9,000,000 on board, which was sent by the home government to pay off troops in her dominions in the new world. Some two years since, a portion of the present party discovered the wreck, and with the aid of little apparatus for the purpose, succeeded in raising about $25,000, and cleared the wreck so that they now anticipate operations will be comparatively easy. A steam engine will be carried out, and also a diving machine of ingenious construction, newly invented by Mr. Jas. A. Whipple, together with submarine armor and other apparatus.

Exciting Intelligence from Australia.—From Australia we have files of Sydney papers to July 7. The gold discoveries are reported to extend in surface, and increase in richness of deposit. Fortunes are being made with great facility. Hundreds of English emigrants are arriving daily from all parts of the world. Business was brisk, and provisions generally high. The amount of dust and ingots shipped to England on the 26th and 27th of June was 25,044 ounces.

The rains had been heavy, and a village, Gundaigar, on the North bend of the Murrambridge, was destroyed by a freshet on the 29th of June, and between 60 and 80 lives lost. The town has been completely ruined.

Coal in Mississippi.—A bituminous mineral, resembling coal in every respect, easily ignited, and giving out great heat and blaze, has been found in large quantities upon the plantation of Gen. W. R. Miles, in Yazoo county. Several tests have been made of it, and with uniform success. More extensive explorations are about to be undertaken, and it is to be hoped that they will prove that our soil can furnish the South West with this exceedingly valuable commodity. A coal mine will be worth more to Mississippi than a gold one. We shall await with some impatience to hear of the results of Gen. Miles's further researches.

Cows Worth Having.—Mr. D. E. Billings, at Le Grange, has two cows which have given a sufficient quantity of milk to furnish his family with milk and butter, besides which, he has sold in six months and six days, 289 pounds of butter, amounting to $89. The cows have no other food than pasture. Such cows would bring down the price of butter so that printers might indulge occasionally.

Wont be a City.—The people of Concord, N. H., will not have a city government. There is a charm about "Concord town meetings," aside from the historic fame of the political battles which have been fought in the old State House, which impels the citizens of that independent township to repudiate all improvements of city municipalities.

Scarcity of Shipping at the South. The Savannah Republican of the 29th ult., complains of the great scarcity of shipping, and calls on Northern ship owners for relief. There are now 10,000 more bales of cotton at that port than at the same time last year.

A Bird Twenty feet High.—Not many years ago a sailor presented at the British Museum a huge marrow bone, which he desired to sell, and which he had brought from New Zealand. The officers of that institution referred him to the College of Surgeons, where, they said, he would find a gentleman—one Professor Owen—who had a remarkable predilection for old bones. Accordingly the sailor took his treasure to the Professor; who, finding it unlike any bone even he had any knowledge of, sent the man away rejoicing with a full pocket—rejoicing himself in the acquisition of a new subject for scientific inquiry. Although the bone had manifestly contained marrow, and was therefore unlike the bones of birds in general, Mr. Owen concluded, from certain structural evidences, that this bone had belonged to a bird, and a bird of a species hitherto unknown.

It was immediately figured and lithographed, and copies, with certain instructions for finding other such bones, were sent out to New Zealand, to be distributed wherever Europeans had trod among the ferns of that colony. Years passed. By and by a very big box arrived in Lincoln's inn-fields, London, containing congeners of the sailor's marrowbone; some of them upwards of a yard long. Professor Owen set to work, and built up from these bones, not one, but five (ultimately eleven) distinct species of an extinct animal hitherto utterly unknown to natural history. It must have been unable to fly (hence the marrow, instead of air, in the bones,) and must have had uncommon pedestrian powers (hence the necessity for marrow).

The structure of the beak and neck indicates that its power of wrenching and grubbing up roots must have been tremendous. Its food was fern roots, which in New Zealand, are so farinaceous that the natives make bread of them to this day.—It has been named the dinornis, because it is the most stupendous of birds (deinos, fearfully great, ornis, bird). The disappearance of the dinornis is easily accounted for. When the progenitors of the present native tribes first landed from the South Seas, the dinornis must have been their only animal food; for in New Zealand no quadrupeds are indigenous.—As it took no longer than a century for the Dutch to extirpate the dodo from the Mauritius, a couple of centuries would have quite sufficed to kill and cook the dinornis off the face of New Zealand.

When these birds had been all eaten up, the Maoris took to killing and cooking one another. The next great zoological excitement to be looked for is a real, live dinornis. If one of these gigantic birds be ever found and brought to the Regens Park, the hippopotamus may accept the Chiltern Hundreds, and retire from the representation of the Nile, disgusted at the lead that will be taken by the honorable member from New Zealand.

A New Styptic.—A pharmacien at Rome, Signor Pagliare, has recently succeeded in discovering a liquid possessing so extraordinary a power of coagulating blood, that if to a large basin containing this fluid one drop of the styptic be added, complete solidification ensues, so that the basin may be inverted without causing any blood to be lost. The practical advantages of this styptic are consequently very great, inasmuch as by its timely application the bleeding from large and dangerous wounds may be immediately staunched. In addition to the other valuable qualities of this liquid, it is totally devoid of poisonous agency, and easily prepared as follows: Take 8 oz. of gum benzoin, 1 pound of alum, and 10 pints of water. Boil all together for the space of eight hours in an earthenware glazed vessel, frequently stirring the mass, and adding water sufficient to make up the original quantity of that lost by ebulition, taking care however to add the water so gradually that boiling may not be suspended. The liquid portion of the compound is now to be strained off, and preserved in well corked bottles. It is limpid, like champagne as to color, possesses a slightly styptic taste and an agreeable odor.—London Daily News.

A Handsome Speculation.—The U. S. Mail steamship Arctic, which sailed on Saturday for Liverpool, takes out as freight twenty-five hundred barrels of apples.—Her predecessor in the same line had two thousand barrels, and the Pacific on a late trip had a large number, which brought in Liverpool twenty-eight shillings per bushel, or seventeen dollars per barrel. They were the best Newtown pippins, costing here about $5 per barrel. The freight charged is $1 20 per barrel,—leaving a handsome profit for the owner. The expedition with which perishable merchandise of this description can be delivered, ensuring its good order, has given rise, this season, to quite an extensive traffic.

The largest single transaction in wool ever made in the Cincinnati market, was made last week, and the Price Current doubts whether it has often been exceeded in any city in the United States. The quantity sold was 240,000 pounds, amounting in the aggregate to $125,000. The price realized shows a very large advance on the rates at which the market opened.—The Price Current understands that 42 cents were paid.

The Greatest Beet yet.—A correspondent at Chelsea, Vt., informs us that Mr. Reuben Squires, of that town, has raised a beet which beats the Webster beet, or any other beet we have yet heard from. It weighed, when it had been out of the ground a week and was free from dirt and the small roots, fourteen pounds and six ounces. When taken from the ground it is said to have weighed sixteen pounds.

John Wadleigh, a soldier of the revolution, died at Shaker Village, N. H. October 23d, aged 95 years, 7 months and 23 days. The old Brewery.—The "old Brewery" has at last passed into the hands of the trustees for the Ladies Home Missionary Society. The required sum has been subscribed, and that which was lately the abode of the wretched, the degraded, and the poverty-stricken, will for the future be dedicated to the purposes of religion.

The Japan Expedition.—The long talked of expedition by the United States government to open the ports of Japan to the commerce of the country, is at last about to start for Jeddo, under command of Commodore M. C. Perry. We have received positive information from an authentic and reliable source, that the squadron detailed for this expedition will sail on or about the first of December proximo. We have also received from the same source the following exhibit of the effective force of the squadron:—

Vessels.	Guns.	Men.
Vermont, 3,000 tons..........	96	800
Mississippi, steam 1700 tons,..	—	375
Susquehanna, " 2500 " ...	—	350

Alleghany, " 1100 " ...	—	190
Saratoga, sloop of war first class	22	190
St. Mary's, " "	22	190
Vincennes, " "	22	190
Razee frigate Macedonian......	22	450
Brig of war Porpoise,........	10	120
St.-ship Southampton, 32 lb. guns	4	...
Do. Lexington, "	4	...
Do. Talbot, "	4	...
Total number of men........		3,045

To the above total of the ships' companies are to be added 700 marines, which, with the complement of the storeships, officers, scientific corps, and others attached to the expedition, will make an effective force of 4,000 men and above 330 guns, mostly heavy ordnance. The steamers are each to mount a couple of Paixhan shell guns of the largest calibre, and placed on revolving trucks so as to sweep the horizon. These guns are intended to be used for the discharge of shells of 68 and 120 lbs each, and long 42's, making 22 guns to each steamer.

Each ship is provided with two brass 24 lb field pieces, to be used for shells or canister shot.

One of the storeships, the Talbot, has already sailed, with extra machinery for the steamers, and shells, shot and other ammunition. The Mississipi, now lying at Annapolis, will be the flag ship of Commodore Perry. The razee Macedonian is to carry twenty 8 inch and two 10 inch shell guns, the latter mounted on railways. The store ship Southampton is ready for sea at the Brooklyn Navy Yard; the Lexington, at the same yard, is fitting out; also the Vincennes. The Macedonian has her guns on board; she is now taking in shot and shell. The sloops of war and the brig Porpoise are to mount long 32 pounders. The Vermont will mount long forty-twos on her lower deck, long thirty-twos on her second tier, and short eighteens on her upper deck. She is fitting out at the Charlestown Navy Yard.

The expedition is to carry out a magnetic telegraph, a locomotive and railway cars, and many other productions of modern civilization, that are doubtless intended to "astonish the natives."

Another Oxford Bear Captured.—Mr. Edward S. Manes, of Fryeburg Academy Grat, in this county, has had his cornfield infested by Bears and much damage done this season. On the night of the 21st ult., after having discovered the beats or paths by which the field was entered, he set a trap in one, and three guns, well charged with balls, in as many of the other beats, determined to give Bruin a hug or a warm reception on his next visit. Each gun covered the path or beat, and had a cord attached to the trigger and running across the beat, so that Bruin was pretty sure to "catch it," if he entered in either of his accustomed paths. The next morning he was found "done for." One of the guns had been discharged, the contents taking effect in the flank of the left side and passing, in its course, through the bowels, liver and lungs, and lodging in the right shoulder. He struggled to regain his native wilds, but only succeeded in getting about thirty rods, and "gin out."—He girthed five feet three inches, and weighed when dressed, three hundred and sixty pounds, and over sixty pounds of "leaf" or 'frough fat," was taken out of him. He is supposed to have been an old offender, against whom the farmers in that section have often made war for his ungovernable propensity to seize and take forcible possession of mutton and various other of their goods and chattels, as he had the marks and scars of quite a number of bullets on different parts of his body.—The whole region is rejoiced that he has at length met with justice, for he has been a great scourge and thief.

A Novel Exchange.—Carpets have risen, apparently, not in price that we know of, but risen from the floors which they used to cover, to envelope the persons of the rapid youth of this metropolis. It is said and who that walks Broadway can doubt it?—that the ingenuity of the makers of pantaloon stuffs, having been put to such exceedingly severe tests during the last ten years, gave out a few months since. In his despair, one of the leading men in that branch of business sat ruminating—so the story goes—with his eyes fixed gloomily on the CARPET, which chanced to be of a vociferous pattern, a very noisy pattern, indeed; "loud," in short, or "stunning," as the English say. An idea seized him. He rushed to the counting-room of a large carpet manufactory near by, and borrowed a little library of old pattern books. From that hour all was well. He sat up half the night examining, admiring, selecting. In the morning the requisite orders were given, and all hands were set at work.—The result he who runs may see. Carpets have risen, and now perambulate the streets. Accelerated young gentleman wear their blushing honors thick, very thick, and very broad upon them.

Iron Masts in a Gale.—In a letter from Lisbon, dated the 10th ult., we find the following statements:—"The British ship Typhoon, iron built, from Glasgow, bound to Australia, with 224 emigrants, put in here on the 6th inst., to repair damages, having lost her bowsprit and foremast and her main and mizen topmasts. I find that the Typhoon was iron-masted, which was the cause of her disaster, as the gale, in which all the masts were snapped, was one which wooden masts, I am told, would have stood out very well. Her emigrant passengers are about to be landed, and the Portuguese government has obligingly agreed to lend a barrack, or some other building, for their accommodation."

NEWPORT MERCURY.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 20, 1852.

The high price which all articles of provision have reached with a prospect of a still greater advance, has awakened the press to the importance of looking around for some means of effecting a more favorable change, though as yet there appears to be no channel through which we may derive the necessary relief. That the crops of the country have been full during the year, none will gainsay, nor have we any complaint of short planting. It cannot then be the fear of scarcity or a short allowance that keeps up the present exorbitant prices. The questions that naturally arise are, where do the supplies go, and who are instrumental in raising the price above a fair valuation. Our tables of export show where all articles of consumption that can be drained from the country find a market.—During the year, ending August 31st the exports of breadstuffs from the United States was as follows, flour 1,444,640 barrels, meal 1,810 barrels, wheat 2,712,120 bushels, corn 1,576,749 bushels.—During the last nine months New York alone has exported to the following extent:—pork 29,965 bbls, beef 37,541 bbls, cut meats 1,357,262 lbs, butter 541,317 lbs. lard 3,879,669 lbs and other articles of provision in the same proportion. Nor is this all, for the demand is large and the prospects are, higher prices as the European market is supplied.

The Merchants Magazine, always reliable in matters of trade, says in the September number:—

"Thus we see that, while the export of flour has slightly increased (73,766 bbls.) from last year, that of wheat has very nearly doubled and that of corn only about half as much, up to the present date.—This difference will be still more perceptible as the season progresses. The late orders have been nearly all for wheat and the clearances now will be quite large compared with the corresponding period of last year."

In the October number:—

"What the future demand for our breadstuffs, from Europe, may prove to be, it is, of course, at present impossible to determine; but our own impression is, that we shall be called upon to furnish large quantities of prime wheat and flour for English markets. The crop there is not only less than we anticipated, but it has also suffered in various places more or less seriously from blight, which has materially injured the quality. For some months succeeding the harvest, it is probable that large quantities of poor wheat will be pressed on the market there and produce a glut of this quality.—But there must even then be a demand for prime American, wheat to mix, and after the stock of native wheat shall be reduced, we may look for a steady trade in American cereals at fair prices."

In the November number:—

"The export of flour has increased only about 60,000 bbls while the shipments of wheat have increased 1,119,186 bushels, or about 120 per cent on last years exports! The shipment of corn has fallen off 700,000 bushels. Provisions have gone forward less freely as a general thing in consequence of their high prices, but beef has been more freely shipped. The prospects of the export trade are quite flattering and an increased demand for prime grain and many other domestic products, may reasonably be expected."

The quantity of provision, spoken of as sent out of the country, applies only to foreign ports. To this amount must be added the immense quantity shipped to California. The extent of this trade we have at present no means of knowing, but the shipments are heavy and there is a constant demand for vessels to charter.

Now, then, who are the parties benefitted by this demand for the products of the country? Not the agriculturist and grazier, not the great body of producers, for the value of stock and produce in the Western markets, is within reasonable bounds and pays about the same profit usually derived, and if they (the producers) are any way benefitted, it is by a more active market. But some one must make an exorbitant profit, and it is none other than the middle man, who sends out his agents, collects and holds the products in large quantities and ships direct to the foreign market. The result is, a comparatively few are in the way to fortune. These control the market and create just demand enough to bring the products of the interior by every canal and railroad to their door, and send back in return the manufactures of foreign looms. And this is not the worst of it; the exports of specie, have (with the exception of 1847, when trade took an unnatural turn) exceeded the imports of that article during the past eight years, and during the past year the export has considerably more than doubled the import.

And for the result: New England sees her manufactories languishing, or idle, her operatives lacking full employment and the mass of the people suffering from the high prices of provisions. Nor have we any equivalent. The producer, as we have already stated does not realize a large price for his crops; the business of the villages and towns has not increased and the wages of the working man are no larger and are less certain than they were a year ago. So that we may thus sum it up in a few words: The larger shipping merchant and the middle man are benefitted by keeping up present prices; the operative and the mechanic have to pay the extra charge without receiving an addition to their weekly earnings and the farmer, while he gets little or no more for his products, has also to pay largely for every article consumed by his family, not furnished by his own farm; for he has to purchase from the middle man, who finds it to his interest to keep up the fictitious valuation. We must, however, exempt all articles of manufacture that he requires, for these are to a great extent the work of pauper labor (fed on provisions shipped from this country) and sold at a fraction under the price of production in this country, for the express purpose of destroying manufacturing interests in the State and advancing the interests of England—making Americans tillers of the soil to supply bread for the under paid and under fed operatives of Birmingham and Sheffield.

The winter is now coming on. The Mechanic who has heretofore found his earnings ample for his wants, with means at command to secure a supply for the season, has been obliged to expend a heavy sum from week to week to keep himself in provision, and now, with a scant purse and with every article of food at prices only asked in time of famine and seige, looks anxiously around and asks himself the cause of this unnatural state of things, and now he is to provide for his family until the return of spring. The first thing to which his eyes are opened is the fact that imported cottons at a cent a yard under the price of the home made, does not balance fifty per cent advance on pork any more than a reduction on silk compensates for the extravagant advance on butter. And when he reaches this point it is easy for him to see the extent of existing evils and to what they tend.

Spouting Horn Road.—A survey has just been made for a new road to connect the Spouting Horn with Thames Street. The present road will be followed to a point directly west of Mr. Luther Bateman's house, where it crosses his land, the land of Mrs. Ruggles, and that of Alfred Hazard, Esq., in a nearly direct line to the Horn. The road will run near the groves of trees, to the west of the house on Rocky farm, and to avoid the abrupt sides of the hills it will not make a straight line, but this will be an agreeable feature. The road, forty-feet wide (fifty it should be) will be staked out immediately and in the spring the lots will be in the market.

The Introductory to a short course of Lyceum Lectures to be given for the purpose of increasing the funds towards furnishing a Library and Reading Room, recently established by the operatives in our Mills, was delivered on Thursday evening by Rev. D. R. Brewer, at the 1st Baptist Church.—Before the commencement of the Lecture, Rev. Mr. Stewart, Rector of "Emanuel Church," in this town, urged the occasion of our approaching Thanksgiving as an appropriate one for the bestowal of our charities upon the destitute and friendless, and touchingly depicted several scenes of distress, which in his daily ministrations to the poor, he was compelled to witness, and too often without the pecuniary ability to relieve.

Mr. Brewer occupied precisely an hour with his remarks, proving from the formation and growth of Plants, Birds, Fishes, Animals, and lastly, from Man himself, that this beautiful world of ours, teeming with life and vegetation, could not have sprung into being by chance; and closed with a merited reproof on those persons who pass a life time of three score years and ten on this green and beautiful earth, with its dome of azure hue, occupied only in eating and drinking, bargaining and discussing Politics, without one admiring glance around "Natures vast Picture Gallery," and without a single emotion of gratitude to the Divine Architect and Designer for the free display of so much loveliness. He closed with the hope that the "Lyceum" now commenced under so favorable auspices, would be an incentive to its members to study the minutiæ of a Flower, as well as the construction of a steam engine, and thus allow the investigation of nature and art to proceed together.

We have rarely listened to a more admirable lecture, and never to one better adapted to educate both the mind and heart.

The next in the series will be given on Thanksgiving Evening at the North Baptist Church, at 8 o'clock, by Rev. Dr. Choules.

These Lectures are entirely free to the Public; a Collection only being taken up during the evening.

The following account of the late voyage of the Clipper Ship Tornado, we clip from the Courier & Enquirer, of the 15th. A private letter from New York, says, Capt. Mumford is at home, worn out, his officers sick, and his crew worthless, there being but eight seamen in the lot. Three days before the accident the barometer fell to 28 deg., and when struck by the whirlwind, the ship was under easy sail, double-reefed topsails, and going about three knots only:—

Among our shipping news we have a report of the extraordinary rapid and perilous passage of the Clipper Ship Tornado, Captain Mumford, in ninety eight days from San Francisco, after having been dismasted in a whirlwind about 1,000 miles west of Cape Horn. We have seen the private log of Capt. Mumford, and congratulate him and the underwriters upon the safe return of his valuable ship and cargo under circumstances of so trying a nature, without putting back to Valparaiso for repairs which for a ship of her size would have been enormous in that port and attended with great delay.

What has added to Captain Mumford's exertions has been the loss of the services of his first and second officers by illness for a considerable part of the passage. When the accident occurred, however, the first officer, Mr. Gibson, crawled from his berth, and exerted himself to the utmost, and contributed largely to the safety of the ship. Such devotion and nautical skill, we are persuaded, will meet due commendation.

Ship Tornado, Mumford, 98 days from San Francisco, with mdze, to B. A. Mumford. Sept. 11th, 2 A. M., lat 46 35 S, lon 88 W, in a whirlwind, lost foremast close to the deck, and bow-sprit close to the night-heads. From the 11th to the 18th Sept., was hove to, making and fitting a jury foremast and bowsprit; from the 18th to the 25th, the only sail we were able to set forward was a fore staysail, the sea being so high were unable to get the yardaloft until the latter day. The Tornado was very near half the passage home when dismasted; was out 33 days from San Francisco, and has made the balance of the passage under jury foremast and bowsprit.

Our townsman, Mr. Samuel B. Westcott, and his partner, Mr. Bonser are among the few lucky miners. We have repeatedly heard of Mr. Westcott's success, but the following from the Sacramento Daily Union, takes the lead. May future reports from that quarter be in the same vein. The copy of the Union, from which we make our extract, is printed on three pieces of white paper pasted together; such is the scarcity of this article in that section:—

"A Valuable Specimen—The Greatest Day's Work of the Season.—Mr. Westcott, of El Dorado county, exhibited to us yesterday a splendid specimen found on Thursday at Spanish Dry Diggings, about a mile from Spanish Bar, on the Middle Fork of the American. It weighs 85½ ounces, and is so nearly pure gold as to be worth the highest market price. Mr. John Bonser was the lucky finder. It was taken out within six inches of the surface, and where it was not more than eighteen inches to the bed rock. The diggings are famous for producing such lumps, several large ones having been taken out in 1850 by the Spaniards who first discovered them. This specimen can be seen this morning at the office of Messrs. Read & Co., corner Third and J. streets.

Mr. Westcott, also informs us that those companies which have succeeded in getting into the river, are generally doing well in that section, some of them exceeding well. The Empire Company, working just above Spanish Bar, took out with ten men and three rockers on Thursday last, what was estimated by all present, at from nine to ten thousand dollars! It had not been weighed when Mr. W. left. It is the greatest yield for one day which has been reported this season.

Our neighbors, Messrs Bliss & Stanhope, have made a "ten strike" in getting out their Jenny Lind Range. This beautiful cooking apparatus has come rapidly into notice and is everywhere received with favor. We have had one in use for some months and in every particular it has given satisfaction. The arrangements for the different kinds of cooking are convenient, it does not consume more fuel than stoves or ranges of the same capacity, and the cook says "its a jewel."

We learn that the "Jenny Lind" took the prize of a silver medal at the late exhibition of the Maryland Institute, and that the demand in that quarter is very flattering to the manufacturers.

Littell's Living Age, Nos 444,445 are received. The latter contains the following good selections:—The Duke of Wellington; Memoirs of the Baroness D'Oberkirch; Euthanasia; The Philosophy of Style; Poems of Oliver Wendell Holmes; Coleridge; Why does the Clock keep Time; Edward Gibbon; Anglo-Saxon Cross-Migration; Claim to the Lobos Islands; The Cotton Crop; Wool from Pinetrees; The Apple.

All that is good in the world of literature is caught up by the Living Age, and weekly offered to its readers.

On Thursday next is the day set apart for the annual Thanksgiving; a day that will be observed by nearly all the States in the Union. On that day all business will be suspended and services will be held in all places of public worship, after which justice will be done to the Thanksgiving dinner.

P. S. We are extravagantly fond of Roast Turkey, and are looking out for a fine Cock to grace our board. Do you take the hint!

Godey's Lady's Book.—The December number is thus early in advance of the season. It is profusely illustrated with designs on steel and wood, though we cannot exactly comprehend "the Morning Star." Its contributions are sprightly and the publisher promises with the January number a nouvellette by Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentze.

We hear of Snow around us in different directions. In New York they have had quite a fall, and at Middletown, Conn., enough fell to run sleds. With us it has spit once or twice, thus far we have had but a slight warning of winter.

The November term of the Court of Common Pleas, will be held in this town next week.

Mr. Editor, Sir:—

Are we right side up, or up side down, or are we topsy-turvy? There is something past finding out at the bottom of the stream, stirring up mud-demons and setting the currents of this world into spirit land, with which a night communication is now regularly kept up. Since the Tartarian deep is bridged and the Stygian quagmire bears up dead men's bones, the flunkies of this world and the shades of the other, keep up vastly many socialistic shindies in the rookeries of the gullibles. Prating spirit-talkers are in the market—to be knocked down to the softest bidder. Authentic entities are pushed aside by famished imbilities, who give open utterance to the incoherent fabrications of dead ghosts, and fret their souls to fiddlestrings. And as these signs evidence progressive dissolution, it becomes us to erect a statue of Corinthian brass in honor of the philosophers of Bedlam and the palavering transitories, who are worthy of our most transcendant admiration. After sore toil to unravel stiffnecked obscurities and the cunningly devised hoodwinking and blinking of barber's blocks; after much tugging and manipulations, they have called forth from the most gaseous, asthmatic spiritual hurdy-gurdy, the frightfulest and bodefulest sounds. For our entertainment (private and select) the spirits of the damned and spotless angels are permitted to masquerade the earth in multifarious bedizenung—a jolly band of grimacing timidities, who write expressive nonsence and balderdash—a sansculottic insurrection of anomalies sent in mercy to a universe of incredibilities, to purge it of vagrant jackalls and incendiary infidels, and receive as their just meed, the felicitations of the recondite for poisoning the world afresh and establishing their artistic botchings as the ne-plus-ultra of humbug.

I am galvanized or spiritualized by the new school, and see around me spirit-stricken mortals not a few. Misbelievers are annihilated or go into fits, primitive indubitables are knocked into pi, and, to perfect the reformation, the Foxes, the Smiths, the Shaws, and other venerabilities, are laboring strenuously to give us a new gospel, dictated by the father of falsities, to instruct hapless entities in an elegant dialect—Barnum could do no more. The guide book, printed on tissues, will be the mirror of Rochester knockings, woman's rights, apehood, asshood, and all convotations of stump orators and small beer—the reflex of this socialistic age and the spiritualism of mankind.

Old Newport, the quintessence of conservativeism, has long watched the oscillations of this spiritual pendulum, and is now exhuming old bones and rattling them with infinite delight and rhapsody.—Our Uppertendom are fairly riding the spiritual hobby and find it marvelously easy. They nightly hear the unmelodious crash of dancing tables and crazy chimney-pots and the jargon of unshackled hob-goblins, who are up to snuff; and assiduously trained spirits, representatives of uncounted millions and not sparing of soft soder for the entrapping of articulate speaking creatures, enact innumerable fooleries and kick over tables, around which are grouped the elect in picturesqueness of position—a blessed and hopeful Phenomenon, that would cause Snarlyle to exclaim, here ends windy falsity and here, we see opening the glorious career of chaos, delusions and spirit-brawling, ad infinitum.

Yours, Rapper.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

The Cabin and Parlor: or Slave and Master, by J. Thornton Randolph; T. B. Peterson, Philadelphia.

Uncle Tom in England a proof that Black's White; A. D. Failing, New York.

Address of the Yearly Society of Friends, held in the City of New York, in the Sixth Month, 1852.

Here are two books and one pamphlet, following in the wake of Mrs. Stowe's extravagant work, Uncle Tom's Cabin, and all bearing on the subject of slavery in this country; but each viewing it in a wholly different light, and in each there is at least a drop of truth to an ocean of imaginings. That Mrs. Stowe has given the world very much of the unreal to garnish that which may have had some foundation, so has she to answer for the publication of a flood of works which are calculated to keep alive an unprofitable controversy.

Of the above works, the Cabin and the Parlor will have the greatest sale. Its incidents, whether real or not, are such as the reader feels might be true. It is not highly colored, but is written in a vigorous style, and many of the scenes, described in the most natural manner, are most touching, while in others the playful humor is as fascinating as it often is eloquent. The second, Uncle Tom in England, is professedly an Echo of Uncle Tom's Cabin, and is put forth as its Sequel. The characters are the same with "modern improvements"; the author stating in the preface that he could not resist "the temptation to repudiate two lines of Mrs. Stowe's book, and to make Emmeline the instrument of her Mother's emancipation." We have not much to say of this work. Its language is coarse and low, if it must be so, to an unwarranted extent and the author appears to delight in exaggerating to the utmost scenes that are bad enough if given with truth.

The Address is delivered with the true spirit and is prepared for the professors of christianity in the United States. It is based on truth and is written in the spirit of the Gospel, but until men's hearts are reached, no great amount of good will arise from such essays. We do not want to be told again and again that evil exists; we know it and those who sustain it know and feel it, and all that is needed is some proper means of healing the sore besides constant probing. In this pamphlet, the only thing offered besides the fact of the existence of Slavery, is for us to "consider whether, while freely trading in and consuming the produce of slave labor, we are not indeed giving the motive and do become ourselves, in fact, a part of the system." If this is the true doctrine why not carry it still further and protest against warming our fields by the same sun that shines on the cotton plantations of Georgia. It is as easy to effect the one as the other. Give us something tangible and the great body of the people will respond, but do not harp forever this one tune of "the oppressive system."

Waverley Novels, illustrated edition, vols. XIII, XIV; B. B. Mussey & Co., Boston; W. H. Peck, Newport. The first is Fortunes of Nigel, and the latter, Peveril of the Peek. The Fortunes of Nigel was commenced in the form of a series of letters, or rather its germ was a series of letters by Scott, given to the world as the production of a Noble English family, during the early part of the reign of James I. The author after being advised by his friends, said, "You were quite right: if the letters had passed for genuine they would have found favor with only a few musty antiquaries, and if the joke were detected, there was not story enough to carry it off. I shall burn the sheets and give you Bonny King James and all his tail in the old shape, as soon as I can get Captain Goffe within view of the gallows."

These novels are not cramped into the smallest space, but are issued in a handsome form (that of Peveril containing 350 pages) and in firm covers.—The illustrations are also good and the price per volume is but 65 cents.

R. P. BERRY,

WOULD CALL ATTENTION to a new method of inserting artificial teeth, recently invented by Dr. Allan of Cincinnati, and for which he (Dr. A.) has obtained letters patent.—This improvement has advantages over all other substitutes for natural teeth in strength, cleanliness and naturalness of appearance.

The metal used is platinum, to which the teeth are soldered with pure gold, and by a cilicious composition, which forms the gum, united to each other and to the metal plate in a firm and substantial manner, giving a beautiful finish, without leaving the least seam or space for accumulations.

R. P. Berry, has purchased the exclusive right to use the above method on this Island, and would respectfully invite the public to call and examine specimens.

The following certificate from Prof. Chase, of Brown University, will serve to show the fitness of platinum for dental purposes.

BROWN UNIVERSITY, April 10, 1852.

GENTLEMEN.—To your inquiry whether platinum may be employed with safety to health in dental operations, I have no hesitations in giving an affirmative answer. It is one of the most inattackable substances in nature. Although resembling Silver in appearance, it is twice the density of that metal, and differs remarkably from it in nearly all its physical and chemical properties. Only two of the known acids—the nitro muriatic and the nitro-hydroflouric—have any effect upon it, both of which dissolve gold with even greater facility. Neither platinum nor gold, when pure, are at all acted upon by the fluids of the mouth, and consequently can exert no prejudical influence upon the system when used in the filling or fastening of teeth. As the former, however, is found in commerce and the arts only in an unadulterated state, while the latter is met with alloyed in every proportion with the baser metals, the employment of platinum may always be regarded as safer than the use of gold, unless it has come immediately from the hand of the assayist. Yours, &c.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

This invaluable remedy for all diseases of the THROAT and LUNGS, has attained a celebrity from its remarkable cures, never equalled by any other medicine before. Other Preparations have shown themselves palliatives, and sometimes effected notable cures, but none has ever so fully won the confidence of every community where it is known. After years of trial in every climate, the results have indisputably shown it to possess a mastery over this dangerous class of diseases, which could not fail to attract the attention of Physicians, Patients, and the public at large.

See the statements, not of obscure individuals and from far distant places, but of men who are known and respected throughout the country.

The widely celebrated Surgeon, Doct. VALENTINE MOTT, of New York City, says:

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,' which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the throat and lungs."

DR. PERKINS, the venerable President of the Vermont Medical College, one of the eminently learned physicians of this country, writes, the CHERRY PECTORAL is extensively used in this section, where it has shown unmistakable evidence of its happy effects upon pulmonary diseases.

The Rev. JNO. D. COCHRANE, a distinguished Clergyman of the English Church writes to the Proprietor from Montreal, that "he has been cured of a severe ashmatic affection, by CHERRY PECTORAL." His letter at full length, may be found in our Circular, to be had of the Agent, and is worth the attention of asthmatic patients.

This letter is from the well known Druggist at Hillsdale, Michigan, one of the largest dealers in the State; and this case is from his own observation.

HILLSDALE, MICH., Dec. 10, 1849.

Dear Sir: Immediately on receipt of CHERRY PECTORAL, I carried a bottle to an acquaintance of mine who was thought to be near his end with quick consumption. He was then unable to rise from his bed, and was extremely feeble. His friends believed he must soon die, unless relief could be obtained for him, and I induced them to give your excellent medicine a trial. I immediately left town for three weeks, and you may judge of my surprise on my return, to meet him in the street on my way from the cars, and find he had entirely recovered. Four weeks from the day he commenced taking your medicine, he was at work at his arduous trade of a blacksmith.

There are other cases within my knowledge where the CHERRY PECTORAL has been singularly successful, but none so marked as this.

Very truly yours.
G. W. UNDERWOOD.

Hear the Patient.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell.—Dear Sir: Feeling under obligations to you for the restoration of my health, I send you a report of my case, which you are at liberty to publish for the benefit of others. Last autumn I took a bad cold, accompanied by a severe cough, and made use of many medicines without obtaining relief. I was obliged to give up business, frequently raised blood, and could get no sleep at night. A friend gave me a bottle of your CHERRY PECTORAL, the use of which I immediately commenced according to directions. I have purchased the fifth bottle, and am nearly recovered, I now sleep well, my cough has ceased, and all by the use of your valuable medicine.

E. S. STONE, A. M.,
Principal Mt. Hope Seminary.

HANOVER, OHIO, April 3, 1850.

Dear Sir: I wish I could tell all that I suffered with a cough & what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for me. It does seem they might be benefitted by the information. I had a lung fever which left my lungs weak and inflamed. Being very feeble and unable to gain strength at all, my friends thought I must soon sink in consumption. I had no appetite, and a dreadful cough was fast wearing me away. I began to take your beautiful medicine, by the advice of a clergyman, who had seen its effects before. It eased my cough at first, and gave me rest at night. In less than a fortnight I could eat well, and my cough had ceased to be troublesome, my appetite returned, and my blood nourished me, which soon restored my strength. Now, after five weeks, I am well and strong, with no other help than your Cherry Pectoral.

Yours, with respect.
JULIA DEAN.

I hereby certify that the above statement of my wife is in conformity with my own views of her case and her cure by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. JOSEPH DEAN.

The above named Joseph Dean and Julia, his wife are personally known to me, and implicit confidence may be placed in their statement.

SAMUEL C. VAN DERWENT,
Pastor of the Baptist Church.

FORMODENTA.
STRANGE, indeed, that so few realize how essential to female beauty, and manly elegance, are a fine set of polished teeth; nothing contributes more toward it; nothing detracts more essentially from it, than neglected, and consequently discolored and disfiguring teeth. They are as essential to health as to beauty, for it is impossible to inhale through decayed or unclean Teeth, without affecting the lungs and stomach, frequently to a serious extent. In offering as a remedy for this evil the FORMODENTA, Messrs. HAZARD & CO., are satisfied that they furnish at once the most perfectly safe, elegant, agreeable, effectual, and withal cheap preparation known for cleaning and polishing the Teeth, hardening the gums, purifying and perfuming the breath. In its present improved state it has received the approbation of every one who has used it, and is just what it assumes to be. For soft, receding or diseased gums, the AMBER GUM WASH accompanies it, producing a rich and agreeable lather in the mouth, cleansing it effectually, and will cure any ordinary disease of the gums in a short time. Together, they form an elegant and necessary appendage to every toilet; No lady should be without them.

BELL'S
SAFETY LAMPS AND FEEDER.
AS it has been a custom from time immemorial to reserve the eloquent Speeches, the most interesting Theatrical entertainments, and the most luxurious Viands for the last, MR. BELL has, in conformity with this long established custom, reserved his newly invented SAFETY LAMP
till near the close of the year, that the public, after having been pleased and apparently satisfied with the inventions of Professors and Doctors, and other distinguished individuals who preceded them, may have a more permanent satisfaction in the REAL FIRE-PROOF LAMP,
Which all the world "have waited for,
And sought, but never found."

This Lamp is very simple in its construction, and its security against explosions, either by expansion or ignition, is self evident. It requires less than half the labor bestowed on every other kind of Lamp to keep it in good order, and to replenish it with Fluid. The great fault (if indeed it be one) is that the manufacturers of Lamp Tops will have occasion to complain, that ☞ since BELL'S LAMPS have come into such extensive use, in almost every part of the United States, the business of Tube making is very much curtailed, as his Lamp top is unscrewed only about four times in the course of a year, Merely to supply the Tubes with new wicks, and of course they will last forever!" ☜ The inventor, though conscious of the truth of this remark, and the reasonableness of this complaint, could not in pursuing his plan to its consummation, avoid an effect so unfavorable to the pecuniary interests o this very respectable class of Manufacturers.

BELL'S FIRE-PROOF FEEDER,
Being a necessary accompaniment, and so admirably adapted to the purpose for which it was invented, must come into equally extensive use.—The nozzle of the Feeder is introduced within a small orifice in the cap of the Lamp, which may thus be supplied with Fluid with the most perfect safety when the wicks are lighted, if occasion should so require.

An application by Mr. Bell, for a Patent for his new invention, has been registered in the Patent Office at Washington.

Citizens generally and especially the Ladies who wish to be supplied with a durable Safety Lamp, that will more than pay for itself in three months, merely in the time that is saved in replenishing it with Fluid, are invited to call at RIDER'S,
171 Thames St.
f they would be Benefitted by the New Invention.

ALSO.—A general assortment of New Hanging and side Camphene, and Fluid Lamps, Extra Tubes, Chimneys, Wicking, and in fact every article appertaining to the Lamp business.

Having the Exclusive Agency of the Boston Lamp Depot we are prepared to give all the New improvements and the best style of Lamps at the cheapest rates.

Together with Severally manufactured Safety Camphene, Pine Oil and Burning Fluid, at wholesale and Retail.

Don't forget to come and examine the above, at RIDER'S,

NEW & IMPROVED
CHIMNEY PIECES
AND PIER SLABS,
Manufactured of Stone by the
PENRHYN MARBLE COMANY.
THESE CHIMNEY PIECES AND PIER SLABS are new and beautiful articles, superior in appearance and finish to any other in the market; can be made of any dimensions, and are sold at low prices. They are very highly polished, retain their beauty much longer than the common marble, and are not injured or defaced by coal gas, smoke or acids. Since their introduction, a large number have been sold, and have given general satisfaction. The labor required to keep them in good order is very slight, as they do not become discolored like other kinds of marble. The stone used in their manufacture is imported from England, where it is very extensively used for architectural purposes, having been known to last for centuries. It does not partake of the brittleness of common marble being tough, strong and durable, and thus perfectly well adapted for chimney pieces, &c. This stone by a peculiar process, is beautifully enamelled, in imitation of the finest Egyptian—the enamel being so firmly incorporated with the stone that it becomes permanent.

The unequalled polish and appearance of these Chimney Pieces and the confidence with which they have thus far been used, give the fairest evidence that the Penrhyn Marble, by its MANY ADVANTAGES, will at no distant day supersede the use of the Egyptian.

Pier Slabs and Shelves for Parlors, Chambers &c., together with bronzed and other kinds of Brackets, of various patterns, furnished to order. Architects, Builders, AND ALL OTHERS are invited to examine them.

Samples may be seen at the store of

The following certificate from Dr. John C. Warren of Boston, was given 16 years since, but will last forever:

BOSTON, January 7, 1835.

Having had occasion to observe that some persons afflicted with Hernia, have suffered much from the want of a skilful workman in accommodating Trusses to the peculiarities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath. After some months of observation of his work, I am well satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public as a person well fitted to supply their wants in regard to those important articles.
JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

CERTIFICATE.—The following certificate is from Professor Stuart, of Andover Theological Seminary:

The undersigned having occasion to employ Mr. J. Frederick Foster, of Boston, in making and fitting trusses for the relief of Hernia, takes great pleasure in recommending him to the favorable notice of such persons as may be afflicted with that and similar complaints. Mr Foster's success in the manufacture, and adapting them to the body, giving ease and comfort to the wearer, surpass (as far as our experience goes) any other manufacturer of the article.

The numerous testimonials which he has received, together with the recommendations of that eminent surgeon, Dr. J. C. Warren, are a sufficient guaranty for all who may favor Mr. F., that his instruments will give entire satisfaction, and he will satisfy all reasonable demands for an equitable compensation.

WARRANTED PURE
COD LIVER OIL!
JOSEPH BURNETT,
APOTHECARY,
No. 3, Tremont Row, BOSTON.
OFFERS to the public this valuable remedy for Consumptive, Scrofulous, and Rheumatic Affections, in the state of the greatest possible purity,—it being prepared by himself from FRESH LIVERS of None but Healthy Cod.
Of the value of this Oil, in the affections above named, it is almost superfluous to speak at this time, when its merits are ackowledged by the most eminent of the Medical Faculty, and its adoption in their practice has been almost universal.

Dr. J. R. C. Williams, of London, after prescribing it in 400 Cases of Consumption.
(in 234 of which he preserved full note,) states in the London Journal of Medicine, "As the result of experience, confirmed by a rational consideration of its mode of action, the Pure Fresh Oil, from the liver of the Cod, is more beneficial in the treatment of PULMONARY CONSUMPTION, than any other agent,—medicinal, dietetic, or regimental,—that has yet been employed.

The public should be cautioned that in consequences of the HIGH REPUTATION deservedly enjoyed by the GENUINE COD LIVER OIL,
many unprincipled persons are imposing upon the public a worthless article, prepared from common Whale or Sperm Oil, or that of other fish, bleached to resemble in appearance the Oil from Cod's liver.

An impure oil, or that prepared from stale or diseased livers, may be productive of deleterious consequences, causing aggravation of disease, derangement of the digestive economy, &c., &c. It is of The Utmost Importance, that the article should be not only COD LIVER OIL, but prepared from FRESH and HEALTHY LIVERS; and of this nature the advertiser warrants the article offered by him as especially worthy the attention of medical men, and others who suffer from the diseases above specified.

For sale by all the principal dealers in New England.

☞ Orders by Mail or Express promptly answered. [May 1, 1852.—tf.
